n the reorganization following the dissolution of the Netherlands Antilles, the smaller islands of Bonaire, Saba and St. Eustatius should be added to the territory of the Netherlands. This is one of the notable conclusions reached by the Dutch Council of State (RvSt), the highest advisory body in the Kingdom of the Netherlands. Having the new "countries" of Curação and St. Maarten to share the same Governor is another. In the advice document the RvSt points out the possibility that this Governor can also become the 'Royal Commissioner' for Bonaire, Statia and Saba, similar to the 12 existing Dutch provinces. A single public prosecutor will also be appointed for Bonaire, Statia and Saba.

► Last Friday caretaker Government Minister Atzo Nicolaï stated that he was "cautiously positive" about reaching political agreements with the islands regarding the dissolution of The Netherlands Antilles in the next few months. According to Nicolaï, the political agreements should precede a "Round Table Conference" where these agreements can be endorsed. Nicolaï stated in the letter that he would be meeting first with Bonaire, Saba and St. Eustatius in early October. The problems he listed as critical were crime, poverty, dropouts and stagnating economic development. He called for "intense" cooperation in various areas, especially those in which the Kingdom Government must provide guarantees.

► A press release said that Her Majesty, Queen Beatrix, looks forward to her visit to the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba later this year. She plans to spend two weeks in the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba during November. The Queen referred to the future constitutional changes in the Netherlands Antilles. She waved to well-wishers from the Noordeinde Palace balcony after the presentation of the Dutch 2007 Budget Memorandum and the opening of the Dutch Parliamentary Year in The Hague. "We face a combined effort regarding the changes in the relationships within the Kingdom," she said.

"This will require a big commitment from all of us. The Government will do its utmost for these deliberations to lead to fruitful results."

► Insel Air cannot fly to St. Maarten using a Surinamese Airlines MD-82 jet. The court suspende the dispensation that the Minister of Transport granted Insel Air earlier th week. The verdict tore the Central Government's defense to shreds in the lawsuit instituted by Bonaire-based Dutch Antillean Express (DAE). In: Air currently has facilities and perso nel to handle only its 19-passengerpropeller airplane. The verdict states: "It is likely that in this competition the company (DAE) will be disadvantaged, if... Insel Air is exempted from the legal requirement having operational control on the flight." Incidentally, the old MD-82 that Insel Air intended to use is currently grounded in Surinam with technical trouble.

Both DAE and Insel Air will try to fly the Curaçao-St. Maarten route with a jet airplane within two months. Insel Air is busy with certification for its own MD-82, and DAE hopes to start regional flights in November. They plan to use two Fokker 100 jets and will use them on the St. Maarten route as well.

► The Netherlands is the EU country with the highest net migration. The Netherlands is the only western European country that sees more people leaving than coming in. The only other countries with net migration were Poland, Lithuania and Latvia. Some 121,000 persons left the Netherlands last year, the highest number ever recorded. The number of immigrants totaled more than 92,000. For decades the people coming to the Netherlands outnumbered those leaving the country. This trend changed in 2003.

In 2005 emigrants outnumbered immigrants by 27,000. A quarter of the emigrants moved to Belgium and Germany in 2005, presumably because of lower real estate prices. Emigration increased further in the first four months of 2006: 29,000 people left the Netherlands, 5,000 more than in the same period a year earlier. How many came to the Antilles was not reported.

- ► An estimated 20,000 persons are residing in St. Maarten illegally. That is the figure, 40% of the total population, that was quoted by Justice Minister David Dick last Monday. "St. Maarten has a population of 50,000 registered residents. Half don't have a Dutch passport."
- ► Venezuela's foreign minister was detained at a New York airport on Saturday, prompting an apology from the US government and compounding already tense relations between the two countries. Venezuelan television said Foreign Minister Nicholas Maduro was stopped for an hour and a half and his travel documents confiscated. "We denounce the US government for violating international law," Maduro told Venezuelan television from New York. "This is a provocation from Mr. Devil," Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez told Venezuelan state television, using a name he called US President George W. Bush at the U.N. General Assembly this week.

- ► The latest American warship to visit Curação (and irritate Chavez) is the frigate USS Stephen W. Groves. The 25year-old vessel is outfitted with modern rockets and two helicopters. It comes just two weeks after the carrier USS Kearsarge spent several days on the island.
- ► Colombian Finance Minister Alberto Carrasquilla voiced concern on Tuesday about recent large weapons purchases by neighboring Venezuela. Russia has sold 24 aircraft, 53 helicopters and Kalashnikov automatic weapons to Venezuela, the world's No.5 oil exporter, for more than $3 billion in July amid protests from Washington. Last week, the US military chief for Latin America said re-

Did You Know...

Sharks have "teeth" skin?

Sharks are fish in the Order Chondrichthyes and have some unique characteristics not shared with bony fish. The scales of sharks (and other cartilaginous fish) are called denticles (or placoid scales) and are similar in structure to teeth. In fact, there are some that believe teeth evolved from denticle-like structures in primitive fish. Denticles point towards the rear, so if you run your hand along a shark's skin from front to back, it feels smooth. If you try doing the same thing from back to front, it is very rough and feels like sandpaper. If you think I'm encouraging you to go out and try this on a shark in the wild, you're mistaken! Even the most passive nurse sharks will attack if provoked. Before the time of sandpaper, fishermen in some cultures would use sharkskin to sand their boats.

Star Authors on Bonaire

Anna and Ned DeLoach, known worldwide as staunch environmentalists, authors and champions for the cause of recreational divers, have been kept very busy during their month-long sojourn on Bonaire at their host resort, Buddy Dive.

Every Tuesday evening they shared their diving experiences with everyone present after the happy hour by showing photos and talking about the behavior and habits of reef fish and other creatures below the surface of the sea.

Ned, author of Reef Fish Behavior in Florida, the Caribbean & Bahamas and editor of the Reef Fish, Reef Creature and Reef Coral Identification series, along with his lovely and energetic wife, proof companion to the Reef Fish Iden-Anna, also signed and dedicated all copies of their books presented to them every Friday evening at the sunset rum punch party at the Buddy Dive Resort.

This year they added a new weekly Fish Hunt on Bonaire where visitors are challenged to record their own sightings of fish species from a list supplied at the Tuesday presentation. Each sight-

Bonaire Bicycle Paths- Now's the Time

S ometimes bad things can turn into good things. Recently crews and heavy machinery have been out, digging up kilometers and kilometers of trenches along the roads in order to put in cables. Although this was upsetting to those people who live along the roads it brought to light the fact that the government does indeed own these areas and can make any changes it likes.

So wouldn't now be the perfect time, since the sides of the roads are all dug up anyway, to put in bicycle paths? People, including children, on bikes would feel safe from speeding cars. It would encourage more people to use their bikes – to go to work, to school or just for pleasure.

So often we have seen Dutch people, new to the island, trying to ride their bikes along the roads. But, soon afterwards, we've seen these same people giving up their bikes and switching to driving a car. How sad.

What heroes DROB and the department of roads could be if they

HALTING MANGROVE VILLAGE IS IN BONAIRE'S LONG-TERM INTEREST

Dear Editor:

STINAPA's Elsmarie Beukenboom's analysis of why the Mangrove Village at Lac should be stopped contains several warning signs for citizens, residents, and, hopefully, the government of Bonaire.

First, allowing development without a thorough environmental impact study establishes a precedent that each new developer can point to in order to get around any environmental regulations. The result will be unbridled development that harms the sensitive marine ecosystem that is Bonaire's main asset for luring tourists. Although it may be tempting for a few to make some big money in the short-term, such environmentally-irresponsible development will mortally wound much of Bonaire in the long-term: its reefs, its economy, its citizens. After all, once the reefs are damaged beyond repair and the marine life is gone, who will come to Bonaire? And if there are no divers, no snorkelers, no tourists coming to Bonaire, what businesses will survive and how will citizens make a living?

Next, Bonaire cannot have it both ways: projecting an image of a pristine marine environment while at the same time polluting and degrading the mangroves, the reefs, and the sea. Such hypocrisy will tarnish Bonaire's reputation, and it will become like so many other islands in the Caribbean (i.e. U.S. Virgin islands) that realized too late that they had destroyed their "golden goose" (i.e. the reefs) through neglect, ignorance, and stupidity.

Finally, this is a "watershed" moment for Bonaire. If the Mangrove Village is allowed to continue, 25 years from now people will look back and be horrified at an ecosystem spiraling into extinction. So now is the time for citizens, the tourism board, community leaders, business owners, etc. to pressure the government to "walk the talk" and hold them accountable for their promises of environmental responsibility. Pauline E. Kayes

MANGROVE PILLAGE

Dear Editor:

The main point of discussion in the newspapers last week about the Mangrove Village is whether there is a system to reach sustainable development on Bonaire. It's focused on the fact that if you're in favor of sustainable development you're against the "Homo Bonairianus." Sorry, so you bring sloppy emotions into the discussion!

I, like nearly everyone else, am thinking about a good future for the people living on Bonaire. One difference is maybe long-term and short-term thinking. Longterm thinking can cost a little prosperity in the near future, but later on it can produce more profit.

How many Bonaireans are really working at the (bigger) construction companies? How many of those construction workers are coming from the mainland? Those workers send their salaries back home. How many contractors make use of a "tax-holiday?" That's also no money for the government. How many make all their monthly payments?

Let's talk about another fact. Is there enough appreciation for construction jobs? How many students are studying for construction work at the SGB (high school)? There are only a few! So make certain restrictions on workers from overseas and pay construction workers the salary they deserve for their hard work. Start at FORMA or SGB's second chance education at the vocational (SBO) level etc. Then you help the future of the Bonaireans who are unemployed now. That's also sustainable development for Bonaire in the next 10 years.

If you have certain rules, you must follow them. Environmental rules protect the island from people who would like to start building the next resort on Klein Bonaire. In Bonaire, where even less than 10% of the area is built on, they can start tomorrow because you can always put the rules aside if it's "good for the economy!"

Administrators, get really interested in the stuff. When you put economy in second place, when you think that sustainable development is something out of the last century. Sustainable development is still development, a better development!

ArkeFly's Back To Rock 'n' Roll

S ince ArkeFly agreed to become the name sponsor for Bonaire's first Rock 'n' Roll concert that takes place on November 10th at Plaza, interest in the event is gathering pace. This week we will profile the stars of the show. It makes some impressive reading!

René started his career some 20 years ago as a teenager in Holland. His success started as an Elvis imitator after appearing in the famous Hennie Huisman's Soundmix show. In the 80s he scored high in the Dutch hit parades with songs like "Are You Lonesome Tonight," "Don't be Cruel," and he rapidly became "The idol of the 80s." Following that success he started to pen his own songs. During this period, songs such as "But Where My Love," "Lonely Girl" and "Young Girls and Cadillacs" became major hits for him. Because of the confidence in René as an artist and in his writing talent his record company allowed him in 1990 to go to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to write, record and produce his new album, "Mission of the Heart."

In the early 90s René went to America to write and record new songs. He wrote for his forthcoming album with people like Mike Stoller (who wrote hits for Elvis). His experience grew as he worked with such stalwarts as John Durill, Chet Atkins, Larrie Londin, Ben Weisman and Phil Everly, to name a few. Phil Everly (of the Everly Brothers) wrote "On Top Of The World" for René and sang harmony on the record.

After success in the States, René returned to Europe to take part in a series of tours such as "The Biker Tour" in 1995.

Next time, we will bring his story up to date and see how he teamed up with Angel Eve.

We invite you to join us at Plaza on November 10th for the show, and we thank our sponsors who joined us for their support! But new sponsors are still welcome. Call Bert or Jo 717-2749, email: fbe@grupello.nl□Antony Bond Sponsors include:

A Heartfelt Gift

E ugene Statie, a police detective, solved a very sad case after an elderly fisherman, Celestino "Papa" Wijman, (72) lost his boat.

Eugene, whose hobby is building boats, was moved by the story and decided to build a new boat for Papa. Last Saturday afternoon Eugene Statie officially presented Papa with the boat. Immediately after the baptism Papa took the boat, Pabotin, out for a test.

A few weeks ago three known delinquents decided to rob a yacht moored in the bay, and they used Papa's boat that had been lying on the coast to get there. But when they were surprised by the yacht's very angry owner, they jumped into the water to escape, leaving Papa's boat adrift.

The next day another fisherman told Papa that his boat was missing. When Papa realized that the thieves had let his boat go he was very sorry because with his boat he could fish and make some money to augment his meager old-age pension.

A few days later Papa got a tip that there was a boat that had drifted on to the coast of Aruba. He went to the police to tell them, but nothing came of it. So he was left with no boat and no way to help make his living.

"What happened to Papa moved and

touched me so much," said Police Detective Eugene Statie, who had heard about the story in his work with the police. Eugene decided to build a boat in his spare time to replace the one Papa had lost.

Eugene contacted Papa to explain his plan. Then he began to look for materials, asking local store owners if they would donate. Two gave their cooperation – Playa Trading and Budget Marine. With the donated materials. Eugene began

With the donated materials, Eugene began to build.

So last Saturday, Pabotin was baptized and launched, witnessed by Eugene's family and two colleagues, Detectives Vrutaal and DePalm.

The Snack Bar Detectives

Their Mission: To seek out the mysteries that lie behind the doors of Bonaire's snacks

This week:

La Ponderosa, Kaya A. Emerenciana

A fter the previous week's success in Rincon, it was difficult to decide on our destination. After some deliberation and several Polars, we decided on La Ponderosa.

With Big D and JJ to assist me, we made our way to see what they could tempt us with. The beers were taking their toll to the extent that we had a bad case of the munchies so we wasted no time. As we approached, the sound of local music was coming from inside. Some people were sitting on the terrace awaiting their meals while a local guy, Edward, was sitting at the bar.

Our friendly hostess for the evening was Andrea. Papiamentu and Spanish were once again the preferred languages, but, as always, we could rely on the locals to fill in the gaps when we were stuck. JJ's Spanish can usually get us around a menu (and is useful in a few other establishments, but that's another story), but it is always nice when a regular is there to help. Edward was more than helpful and we placed our order with consummate ease.

As I said, the munchies had set in some time earlier. After a few more beers we were ready to eat. I needed a starter to put me on. Fish soup, freshly made and a meal in itself at just NAf5. Big D joined me; there had been some serious growling from under the bar that turned out to be his stomach. He decided on a Sâté starter, two large sticks with dressing, NAf3,50. JJ was happy to continue with his liquid diet until the main courses came.

Three large plates arrived. Strip beef and peppers served with fries for me, Kabritu Stoba for D and Conch for JJ. The meals were hearty and delicious, just what we needed. After our food we chatted and listened to the music. JJ was debating conservation with Edward while Big D and I covered every topic from Fun Fairs to food.

A few more Polars slipped down and then it was time to go. We had certainly been lucky again. Great food, great service and great company. Don't sit at home; you can't make it this cheap. Three meals, two starters and drinks for less than NAf90. Anyone want to buy a cooker? \square SBD

Pet of the Week

Liver see a cat just pining away for an owner to love? That's "Bob," this handsome black and white "tuxedo" cat. His previous owner had to leave him when she left for Europe. This sweet cat really does deserve a loving owner. Bob is about two years old, in great health and would be ever so much happier if he could look after some kind human who would take him in. Cheer up, Bob. I'll bet just the right person is out there looking for a perfect cat like you.

You may see Bob and all the other healthy and social pets up for adoption at the Bonaire Animal Shelter on the Lagoen Road, open Monday through Saturday, 8 am to 1 pm. Tel. 717-4989.

Speaking of adoptions, so far this year there have been 100 pets who have been adopted from the Shelter. Congratulations and best wishes to all! Last year there were 158 adoptions for the whole year; 2004 there were 150; 2003 there were 110; and 2002 there were 90. \Box L.D.

New Barracuda Season

The Bonaire Barracudas have officially opened the 2006-2007 swim season by participating in the Curação Swimming Federation (CZB) 1st Open Swim Meet. Six swimmers aged 11 and under traveled to Curação on September 23rd for the one-day event held at Sentro Deportivo Korsou's 50-meter pool. Bonaire swimmers and parents alike are delighted that this season's Open Meets will start at 15.00 rather than 10.00 as in past years. The later start time makes travel to these competitions much less tiring for the young athletes.

Open Competition rules allow swimmers 10 and under to compete in two events while swimmers 11 and older may elect to swim as many as three events in the meet. The Open Meets allow swimmers to compete in a given event for the first time or to try and improve their personal best time in an event they have previously swum. Times registered at these meets are used in the qualification process for the 2006 Netherlands Antilles National Swimming Championships which will be held in Curaçao on December 8–10.

The electronic timing system was not in use during this competition due to technical problems so official times are still pending. Nonetheless, unofficial times registered by Barracuda parents indicate improvement particularly in the sprint (50 meter) events.

Participants in the 1st Open Meet were: Ryda-Luz Emer (10) - 50 meter breaststroke and 50 meter freestyle

Luis Marcano (7) -50 meter breaststroke and 50 meter freestyle

Asdrubal Marcano (9) -50 meter breaststroke and 50 meter freestyle

The Bonaire Reporter is very pleased and honored to have been asked by the English teachers of the SGB (high school) to allow them to use the weekly issues of the paper in their English classes. "In return," they say, they will be sending The Reporter stories and interviews by the students. We look forward to a fruitful relationship with the budding English writers and journalists.

This Weeks Star Pupil: Dary Medina

How old are you Dary? 15 years old. What's your star sign? Taurus In what group are you? T2B (ex MAVO) What do you want to become when you grow up? I want to become a doctor. Or at least study medicine. If that doesn't work out I want to become a manager of a bank. Why do you want to become a doctor? Because I like helping people and I want to be able to take their pain away.

Where are you from? I'm from Colombia. How long have you lived here? On and off for 14 years; I was one when we came here. After six years we went back to Colombia. From there we went to Venezuela. But that was only for a couple of months. And then we came back again.

What do you like about living on Bonaire? Bonaire is a quiet and peaceful island. Things around here are safe. There aren't any dangerous things going on. I love the beautiful sea. The only thing I don't like is that there aren't many activities for us teenagers. What's your favorite subject? Spanish. Why? Because that's my mother tongue and so

I'm good at it.

What's your least favorite subject? Math Why? Because it's difficult to understand. What would you like to change at the SGB? I don't like having to carry these big, heavy bags. I would love for the SGB to get some lockers. Sometimes other pupils fight with each other and I don't like that either. What happened last Tuesday gave me a scare, but I still feel just as safe as before. (An explosive device was found in the school. Ed.)

What do you like about the SGB?

I like sports and I like the kids in my group. I feel ok at school. I do still have some problems with Dutch, but I manage. Learning is sometimes difficult. English is even more difficult because of the pronunciation. But I like it.

What are your hobbies?

Dancing, singing, learning, listening to music and swimming (naturally).

Do you know about the Hr. Ms. Bonaire?

Launched in May, 1877, the 53.6m. (176 ft.), 3-masted "composite" (also powered by steam) *barquentine served in the Dutch navy. In 1924 she was renamed the Abel Tasman and transferred to the Delfzijl Nautical College to serve as living quarters for the students. In 1995 the college closed and the ship lay in the harbor in Den Helder. There were plans to restore her but no funds became available. In April 2004 she sank at her moorings, but was refloated. In 2005 a foundation was established to restore her. A seven-year restoration project is scheduled.

Preserving Bonaire's Architectural Heritage

A t this time Gielmon "Funchi" Egbrechts is the owner of this house which is in Noord di Salina. He lived here from his second until his fifth birthday with his parents. Between then and now this house has had many different owners, some staying a long time, others shorter. Once there was even a lady who ran a little toko (shop) in the house.

In December 2004 Funchi was asked to restore the old house for a cousin. This elderly cousin was living in Holland and planned to return to Bonaire in five years. Funchi started the restoration job, but a few weeks ago the cousin passed away. Having already begun the restoration Funchi decided to keep going, starting with the roof and the bathroom.

Maybe some of the inhabitants of the house didn't stay long because it's beensaid that this is a ghost house. One of the stories is told that when the owners of the house were in their kunuku house some neighbors heard music and a lot of talking. But they knew this was impossible because the owners of the house weren't there. The neighbors went to the kunuku to warn the owners. When they all arrived back, the music and talking had stopped and the party was over......"

Antique Living Houses (Continued from page 11) Funchi doesn't live in the house because he prefers to stay in his kunuku house. Now, most of the time young adults like Charles Jansen live here. They live here on their own, and Funchi helps them how to learn to stand on their own

The left side of the house looks like a Cas di Hala. The extensions they made on the left wing resemble a Cas di

two feet

After nearly one year of searching for old houses and writing about them, I finally found a house with an open baking oven. Like all the other houses its kitchen is on the west side, downwind. So the smell of cooking and smoke from the fire goes straight up the chimney or out of the windows and not through the house. The bricks in the fogon (oven) are original and not plastered with cement or concrete. They used this fogon so much that the stones of the fireplace are broken (photo top right).

The stones in the oven are laid in an attractive pattern and are in in extremely good condition (photo top middle).

This house has a lot of traditional furniture and lamps. The old oil lamp in the photo now works on electricity.

The old heater/stove made of foundry iron came from Holland to Bonaire with Funchi's sister. You can cook on it, but here it isn't used very much.

In the bottom left photo we see a little drinking cistern by the kitchen door. At the back of the house is a big cistern. It's still functioning with water inside. Past and present coexist very well in this house. \square

Help Save Our Parrots

The Save the Lora Foundation is asking the people to come up with a solution.

n the next weeks the annual campaign ■ will begin, asking the people to help with the protection of our Loras-Bonaire Amazon parrots. In the Papiamentu newspaper Extra several stories have appeared. Two of the local radio stations (BonFM and Digital) have transmitted spots daily. The goal is to protect our Loras in their natural environment because their survival is in danger. At the moment Bonaire has more Loras living in cages than are in the

During the dry period there are not sufficient places in the wild for them to get food so the birds come to the populated areas where there is food. Naturally, the owner of a mango tree, for example, finds it unpleasant when the Loras eat the fruit before

So the Foundation to Save the Loras' motive is to search for a solution and they're asking the community to make some suggestions.

The Foundation is going to investigate whether kites or scarecrows in the form of the Warawara bird could help to keep the Loras away from certain areas. (The Warawara is a carrion eater and feared by the Lora).

They're also thinking that perhaps there must be more areas in the mondi. Also planting trees and shrubs would be a good long-term solution.

The Foundation also suggests to the owners of fruit trees that perhaps they can pick the fruit the moment just before they are ripe and let them ripen in a safer place. So people of Bonaire and our Loras can live in

The Save the Loras Foundation is looking for volunteers and donations to put these ideas into practice. If you can help contact the secretary at 785-7749.

The Campaign

The information campaign in the coming weeks is a continuation of the previous years' campaigns. In 2002 the government registered and banded all Loras living in captivity. More than 600 Loras were registered. The goal was to eliminate taking the birds from the wild. If someone has a Lora without a ring in a cage it's considered illegal. During the next weeks the police, the SSV, the Environmental police and STINAPA will be extra alert for any violations. Maintaining our laws are not only the work of the police but also each one of us. Everyone in the community can help by reporting any strange actions that they might see. Our pride in our Loras relates directly to our Bonairean environment. Elsmarie Beukenboom/ Translation by L.D.

Karen van Dijk

66 mmediately after they got mar-⊥ ried my parents left Holland and job as a teacher. I was born there in 1963 and three years later I got a little brother. Whenever my parents would go out, they'd always take us with them; we never had a babysitter. We went to all the parties where we'd fall asleep together with all the other children.

When I was six we moved back to Holland. I'd never been there; it was in the middle of summer and I was walking around in a winter coat, shivering. The first time I went back to the Antilles I was 15. I went with my mother and two of my girlfriends – it was 1978. Most of the trip was on Bonaire seeing friends. It was all about spending time together and sharing experiences, just like when I was a child on Aruba. On the plane back to Holland I was heartbroken. When we got back my father had accepted another job and we were going to move.

My first job was as a room maid and a waitress in a very fancy hotel. It was all for one purpose: I wanted to save money to go back to Aruba. But when I had the money for the ticket, the family I was supposed to stay with on Aruba was called back to Holland and I couldn't go. It was a big disappointment.

When I finished high school I didn't know what to study. My father had always told me, 'You can be whatever you want to be, but I wouldn't advise your becoming a teacher.' It was a strange statement from someone who was a born teacher who loved what he was doing. So, I decided to become a teacher! I got my second degree in manual dexterity and drawing so I could teach at MAVO and HAVO.

After I graduated I decided to take a year off; I went on vacation to Pharos, a Greek island close to Athens. I got a job there but under the condition that I had to read and write Greek fluently. So, I went back to Holland and took this intense course, eight hours a day, for three months. Then I left for Pharos again and started working with a goldsmith, helping don't want to go back to Holland... ever him to design and sell jewelry. I lived in a very small room and I was working long days. After almost a year I came to the conclusion that in Greek society a woman has very little to say.

It had been my plan to go and study architecture in Athens, but I changed my mind. I am a very flexible person and I can cope for a long time, but don't give me the feeling I've got nothing to say and don't take away my freedom. I was in love with the island, the countryside, the little village, life in nature – we would pick the figs from the trees, kill a chicken ting on a bench close and roast it, catch some squid and make a to Karel's and I told went to Aruba where my dad had gotten a delicious lunch, just a very simple natural Angel, 'They will life. It made me and it still makes me very happy.

Nevertheless, I went back to Holland and started studying communication at HEAO night school. In the daytime I worked in restaurants and did PR for a Salsa dance school. In my second year I started working as an intern at Saatchi & Saatchi, at the time the biggest advertising agency in the world. Those were crazy times - very creative - and I met so many inspiring people! Then they asked me to work full time for them and that's what I did for some years until they changed the board of directors and I quit. name it! For a while I worked as a freelancer for several advertising agencies."

Karen van Dijk (43) gets up from her chair and says, "Sorry, but I have to do my exercises." She starts stretching her knee and balancing on one leg while she proceeds talking, very relaxed.

"...whenever I saw something on TV about Bonaire I became very sad. On Christmas 2005 I came to Bonaire again to see 'Is it for real?'"

"In spite of the fact that I was having a great time it felt like something was always missing. I wanted to go back to the Antilles but there was always an excuse. I had a good job, a very nice income and career opportunities. I could study and I had a fancy apartment. Well, I went on vacation to Colombia with a very good friend. I was 29 and two months before I'd fallen in love with Angel, an Aruban. As my friend and I had already planned and booked that vacation before I met Angel, I went on with it.

When we got to this island it was there that I got this overwhelming feeling: I again! Enough! It's now or never! I was- buildings and the grey weather and the n't married; I didn't have any children and I wouldn't hurt anybody if my decision was the wrong one.

I went back to Holland and from there to Edinburgh, Scotland, where my boyfriend, Angel, was in the Navy. It was Valentine's Day when I arrived and I told Angel I didn't want to stay in Holland anymore. He looked at me and asked me if I wasn't going to ask him if he wanted to come with me. That was February 1993 and in May that year we arrived on Bonaire. The second night we were sit-never get me out of here!' Angel was working for Bonimex, a wine company, and I was working from the house, painting signs and making art, designing brochures, things like that. After a year Angel and I broke up. I became a dive master, waitress, babysitter – you

One day I got a call from Bonnie Kerr from New York, who was at the time the owner of the Bonaire Art Gallery, asking if I wanted to be the manager of the gallery! I didn't know what was happening to me - Yes! Of course! I did it for two years and on the weekends I was still a dive master. It was fun and I felt so tough working on a boat

After two years I started my own company, Sign Studio Signal. It was fun and I did it for more than four years. I put banners and signs on cars, boats, shop windows, even planes, but it was a limited market and after some time it wasn't a challenge anymore. There are people who STINAPA and when I got the job as a can sit out the ride - in a relationship or in communication coordinator it was final! a job - but I'm not like that. I sold the business to Rhonda Kossman and I left

I found a nice job in the graphic sector, a good apartment. I took a theatre course, a singing course. I learned sculpture, I went to concerts and museums, I indulged myself in books – I was charging my batteries. But there were some things I hated with great passion: the amount of traffic and its stinking smell, the grey self-centered people in bad moods. But I did live close to a lake and a forest, only 15 minutes by bike, and that saved me. I stayed five years in Holland until I had an islands – because I accident and they put prostheses in my right elbow.

My mom, who lives on Bonaire, called me and said, 'Come over; I'll take care of you.' That was April last year and again I fell madly in love with Bonaire. Six weeks later I went back to Holland, hoping I would get cured of my love. I didn't feel like emigrating again; I had everything I wished for in Holland. I buried myself in all kinds of things, but whenever I saw something on TV about Bonaire I became very sad. On Christmas 2005 I came to Bonaire again to see 'Is it for real?' and hoping it wasn't because of all the consequences.

Within a week I knew I wanted to stay here. STINAPA Director, Elsmarie Beukenboom called me for an interview at It took me a little bit more than three weeks to arrange everything in Holland and I started with STINAPA March 1st this year.

In all those years I never wanted to buy a house, but now I want to buy one and settle down. I feel the people here are a little bit shy deep down and that's how I am too. I see the simple beauty of the elderly people, the fishermen, the kunukeros and it touches me in such a way that I can cope with the lesser things. Holland has it advantages, but it doesn't touch my heart. And maybe – it's because I am from the was born here."

The Bonaire Animal Shelter got another donation for further improvements. Birgit Adam from Hanau, Germany, came during her second stay on the island to visit the Shelter. In her bag she not only had new toys for the puppies but also $621 she gave to Jurrie

A Vacation Without Cruelty to Animals

Mellema, the Animal Shelter Manager. Also she brought an additional $175 to the Donkey Sanctuary for the renewal of an adoption she made after her first stay.

"I'm so happy to see all the efforts on the island to help wild and domestic animals," Brigit said. Last year she and her friend visited Bonaire the first time. They were overwhelmed how private initiatives and the government protect nature (Marine Park, Donkey Sanctuary, Flamingo Sanctuary and Animal Shelter). "This is our first destination where we found such a dedication to animals. Elsewhere you have golden beaches, but if you look behind them, you will find cats and dogs or even domestic creatures suffering or starving."

Therefore, Mrs. Adam prepared eagerly for the second visit: She sold books to her colleagues at the Helaba-Bank in Frankfurt, always with the proviso that all the money would be given to the Bonairean animals.

During her visit Mrs. Adam found the Animal Shelter to be in "excellent condition." She knows what she is talking about, because she had been building up the shelter in her hometown in the early 1990s and had been president of the Hanau dierenbescherming (animal protection) for eight years.

"It is very important that there is also a program for neutering of cats and dogs because it is the best way to prevent overpopulation - and suffering animals. I hope more animal owners will take part in this program and more contributors give support. It is a great chance to keep the Animal Shelter from being overcrowded," Mrs. Adam told The Reporter. She is an online-subscriber in Germany and reads about the island every Thursday. "I first read the Pet of the Week section and then all the news about nature."

Autumn's Great Cosmic Square Replaces Summer's Great Cosmic Triangle

've often reminded Lyou, whenever the seasons change on Earth, so too do the stars change overhead, thus the phrase "the stars of the season." Now that phrase, "stars of the season," usually refers to the major stars and star groups that reach their highest position above the horizon in midevening. So because autumn began last Saturday, the 23rd we should already see a change in the stars overhead.

On any night during the first two weeks of October, around 10 pm Sky Park Time, look just west of overhead where you will see the three bright stars which make up the points of the Summer Triangle: the brightest being Vega in the constellation Lyra the Harp; the second brightest, Altair, in Aquila the Eagle; the third brightest, Deneb, in Cygnus the Swan.

Now during the first week of summer, at the end of June, the Summer Triangle was just rising in the east at 10 pm. But if you went out at 10 pm each successive week all summer long you would have noticed that the Summer Triangle was a little bit higher in the sky each week, and at the end of August was almost directly overhead at 10 pm. But if you looked to the northeast at 10 pm at the end of August you would have also noticed that the autumn constellation Cassiopeia, a group of five stars which when connected by lines looks like the letter "m" or "w" on its side, was just rising.

And if you looked just above and east of Cassiopeia you would have also seen four dimmer stars which, if you draw lines between them, make up a great rectangle or square and which is called the Autumn Square or the Great Square of Pegasus, because it is part of the huge constellation Pegasus, the winged horse. Then if you went out each successive week in September at 10 pm you would have noticed that the Summer Triangle was slowly moving past overhead and beginning its descent toward the western horizon while the autumn Square of Pegasus was ascending higher and higher in the east, so that by the first two weeks of October it is almost overhead at 10 pm.

And I think it is rather poetic that the three blazing hot stars that make up the Summer Triangle are replaced by the much dimmer and softer stars of the Autumn Square because autumn is after all the softest and gentlest season of the year. So some night this week and next go out and see for yourself how the heavens above have their own seasons just as our Earth has below. Look first for the Summer Triangle west of overhead and beginning its descent toward the western horizon, then look for autumn's Cassiopeia, in the northeast, and finally almost overhead, autumn's biggest and gentlest Great Square which the ancient Babylonians believed was the doorway to paradise. And, if indeed autumn is a visual paradise on Earth, how appropriate that this lovely portal to a cosmic paradise heralds in the new season. \Box J.H.

THE STARS HAVE IT

Sunday, September 24 to Saturday, September 30, 2006

By Astrologer Michael Thiessen

ARIES (Mar. 21- April 20) Courses dealing with psychology or health care will be of interest. Upgrading at this point is not a bad plan. Avoid functions that will bring you in contact with those you find difficult to get along with. Don't be afraid to say what's on your mind. Your lucky day this week will be Saturday.

TAURUS (Apr. 21- May 21) Do not invest in ventures that only appear to be lucrative. You can certainly gain popularity; however, don't do it by paying for everyone else. Do a little investigating if there is someone at work you don't trust. Focus, and concentrate on yourself and your future. Your lucky day this week will be Friday.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21) So smile! Elders may need your help. Don't overindulge in anyway. Look into intellectual and physical games that will test your abilities. Your lucky day this week will be Sunday.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) Talk to those in a position of power about your intentions. Expect to have more people on your domestic scene. Don't count your chickens before they hatch. You may find yourself interested in more than one person. Your lucky day this week will be Sunday.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Arguments will flare up if you get backed into an emotional corner. Problems with financial investments could make you nervous. Things may not be as they sound. You can make money if you are careful not to let it trickle through your fingers. Your lucky day this week will be Tuesday.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 -Sept. 23) Your creative input will be appreciated by your boss. You will get along well in social situations. Get back into a routine that promises a better looking, more aware individual. Look into ways that you can make extra cash. Your lucky day this week will be Sunday.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 -Oct. 23) Your greatest enjoyment will come through social activities and pleasure trips. Sudden changes could result in estrangements. Be discreet about your personal life or whereabouts. Be mysterious. Make changes to your home that will be pleasing to everyone involved. Your lucky day this week will be Tuesday.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) You should be getting into self-improvement projects. Don't overspend on children or on large purchases. Unexpected bills may set you back. Socializing or travel will lead to partnerships. Your lucky day this week will be Saturday.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 -Dec. 21) Depression may put a damper on your day. You will be able to pick up on future trends if you keep your eyes peeled for unique ideas. You can expect changes at your work place. Minor accidents may occur if you don't concentrate on what you're doing. Your lucky day this week will be Sunday.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22.- Jan. 20) Emotional ups and downs have caused doubts in your personal life. Your added discipline will enable you to complete some of those unfinished projects. Help children complete projects they're having difficulty with. A trip to visit relatives should be rewarding. Your lucky day this week will be Thursday.

AOUARIUS (Jan. 21 -Feb. 19) Try not to hurt your partner's feelings. There might be a problem with a will or with an insurance policy. Acceptance is the key. You may want to make plans to take a vacation together. Your lucky day this week will be Tuesday.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20) Turn your present relationship around or start a new one. This will not be the day to start new business ventures or make drastic changes in your career. Find ways to mellow out. Deception is probable if you don't use discrimination. Your lucky day this week will be Sunday. \Box M.T.
