Following a few confusing weeks the Bonaire island government hasn’t changed. Following the departure of Jeanoushka “Nunu” Raphaella from the ruling coalition the government “fell.” (see last edition of The Reporter). Attempts to recreate the “Watermelon” coalition (PDB red) & UPB (green) parties on November 8 stalled. Finally on November 15, the old coalition was restored when Raphaella agreed to “tolerate” the current three commissioners on the Executive Council and said she would remain part of the government. The situation is a first for Bonaire.

Bonaire’s biggest and best organized volunteer event, Bon Doet, will be on Friday and Saturday March 10 & 11, 2017. The deadline for notifying jobs is January 20, 2017. The new website is online with all the information in Dutch and Papiamentu at www.bondoet.com. Let it inspire you. To join sign up early and register.

On October 26, the first stone for a Chinese recreational center along the road to Sorobon near sports Jossy Bockhoudt was laid. Bonaire’s Governor, Curacao-based Deputy Consul General of China, Mr. Zhang Huixun, and representatives of Bonaire’s Chinese community participated in the event. The center will serve the Chinese community, as well as other organizations, as a place where various social, recreational and educational activities can take place. It aims to be open the center within seven months.

Besides tax forgiveness InselAir has approached the Government with a request for a loan because it says it is unable to collect more than US $100 million for tickets sold in Venezuela (a claim denied by Venezuela). The persistent nature of the problem is detrimental to the daily operations of the carrier InselAir says...

Last week it was revealed that Curacao’s privately-owned airline InselAir currently pays no social premiums or taxes. Management says it has an agreement with the Ministry of Finance due to the aviation company’s poor financial situation. Sources claim the airline is on the border of bankruptcy. The Curacao government has appointed a committee to find a permanent solution. It is to report in three weeks. According to Curacao’s Minister of Economic Development, Eugene Rhuggenaath, the company is too big to allow it to go under.

KLM suspended its code share agreement with InselAir, according to the Up in the Sky website. KLM is doing this because of operational problems at InselAir.

Momentum is building for the Wild Conscience Group’s petition to modify the legislation for building permit requests to allow the island’s original vegetation to be removed during two centuries in a non-sustainable manner to recover. It would mean that in the future all projects must be fenced in to keep out grazing goats, sheep, pigs and donkeys. Invasive plants have to be removed from the land and a fixed 1:1 division is to be maintained between structures and garden space.

The Black Petes- are coming to town by boat on Saturday, November 26, around 2 pm. He will be at waterfront Wilhelmmina Park and downtown Kralendijk until 5pm. In addition to Santa there will be lots of other activities for children set up in the park. If you greet him, be prepared for a nice crowd of performing “Piet’s.” It’s a great event. On November 6, five swimmers of the Barracudas Bonaire Aquatics Club participated in the 15th Aruba Dolphins Invitational. This very well organized swimming competition was held in the 50-meter pool Pisina Olimpico Roly Bisslik in Aruba. There were 12 swim clubs in this competition section with a total of 231 swimmers. They came from Aruba, Curacao, St. Maarten, Dominican Republic, Colombia, Trinidad, Argentina, and of course, Bonaire. After three days of swimming the improved Bonaire Barracudas tallied 40 personal bests and several performance ribbons.

Bonaire’s talented swimmer Chenice Bergman (above) also has the highest point trophy for girls aged 9-10 years—a fantastic achievement. If you are interested in the sport of swimming (competitive swimming and water polo), please contact via email: barracudasbonaire@gmail.com.

James Finies NKBB foundation got a boost when it was endorsed by one of Bonaire’s largest labor unions, the USIBO, last week. It adds to the support already given and positions NKBB well for its December 1 symposium. (See bottom of page 4).

The Reporter’s newest writer, Roderik Six, was the first place Prose Winner of the Province of West Flanders, a prize given once every three years, for his contemporary, macabre novel Fall (Val). Reviewers say that the literary mystery story about an isolated village in Canada where a new doctor is coming to live “gets under your skin and keeps gnawing ...” His novel, in Dutch, is a sophisticated but relentless descent into existential blackness of man. Val (★★★★) is published in Dutch by Prometheus. See page 9 for Roderik’s newest story.

The beauty of Bonaire was wonderfully celebrated on Saturday, November 17, when Bonairean born artist Sasha Van Duyn’s 2017 calendars were unveiled.

The party event was about the people and the unspoiled nature of Bonaire. Bonaire Youth Outreach talked about their plans for a “Brilliant Christmas (Pasku Brillante)” program and several of the island’s environmental protection NGOs, like Wild Conscience and STCB, presented their projects. There was music by DJ Annemiek and percussionist Paradis. Delicious free snacks were provided by Karel’s Beach Bar. Throughout the evening there were video and photography projections about Bonaire. Most of the attendees wore white as requested.

Funds raised by sales and a raffle, with big prizes donated by Digicel, Bonaire Air Services and others were donated to participating non-profit groups.

The 2017 Beauty of Bonaire Calendar was unveiled. It shows numerous beautiful locations of Bonaire and the images feature the diverse cultures living on the island. The calendar was made possible by funding from EuroParcs Resort Bonaire. You can get calendars, starting at $25, at Addo’s Book Store, Between Two Buns, Penny Lane and on the beautyofbonaire.com website and Facebook page.

The calendar’s creator, Sasha Van Duyn, is a Bonairean who lived abroad most of her life but came back to the island a few years ago to enjoy being with her family on Bonaire. She embraces the diversity of the island and wanted to be part of making a difference. ■ Press release/ G.D.

RINCON – During the last Cultural Market at Cultural Park Mangazina di Rei, Mrs. Ludwina “Dinah” Veeris gave an educational talk about our local herbs. She explained how healthy these herbs were for different organs. She expressed her gratitude by thanking God for the richness of our Nature and for all the knowledge she received from the old wise men on the island. At the end of the presentation Dinah informed the audience that all the herbs would be obtainable at her stand.

Also as part of the program Mrs. Heleen Christiaan explained about the Mangazina di Rei project, “Kunuku Lifestyle Challenge.” A group from Curacao, Maestronan Pensonado (retired teachers), sang different songs to entertain the public. There was also the presentation of the scarf tying as part of our culture which has become a great hit. To close off Mrs. Lucia “Vera” Mercera gave a demonstration of how to make the local cactus soup. This time there were live presentations from the local bands “F.M.K.” (see cover) and Ekspreshon Ritmiko.

As usual during the market you could have a traditional breakfast consisting of fresh bread from the oven or a pumpkin pancake, and this time there was even the traditional Johnny Cake. During lunchtime as usual, the local traditional plates were served: goat stew, salted fish and other popular plates. All are served with the local side dishes funchi (polenta) and tutu (a solid mixture made out of beans).

To get an impression of the ambience during the last Cultural Market you may visit the Facebook page, www.facebook.com/mangazinadirei.

A special thanks goes out to all the entrepreneurs, organizations, media and visitors who help sustain and promote the Cultural Market of Mangazina di Rei with the aim of making the area of Rincon more attractive for tourism and leisure on (Continued on page 14)

If you’re planning on making a fabulous Thanksgiving meal at home, best to be aware of the maintenance work, power outages that WEB has announced for Wednesday November 23 through Friday November 25 between the hours of 8am and 12 noon in three different areas of the island. Respective areas affected on each day are posted on their Facebook page “WEB Bonaire.”

- Curacao’s North Sea Jazz Festival, always a great weekend of music, will not take place this year. Organizers report that no “headliners” are available during the scheduled dates for the event due to tours and recording commitments of the artists. Rather than have a “second rate” festival, they have opted to cancel this year’s event.

- Whispered rumors on the street that a certain establishment featuring fine “spirits” will soon be closing.

- Patagonia Restaurant’s renovation of their new location (at the former site of La Luna) is nearing completion. Word is they should be open by month’s end.

- The previously rumored “gourmet Asian restaurant” coming to the island will be part of the Jasmine Garden Restaurant and Hotel. The large edifice at the corner of J. A. Abraham Boulevard and Kaya Industria (opposite Divi Flamingo) reportedly will feature a gourmet restaurant on the ground floor and hotel rooms above.

- Lots of publicity about the new Chogogo Resort (see pg. 2) to be built at the former Sunset Beach Hotel location. But not much “talk” about the new 84-apartment Delfins Beach Resort (photo above) located next to Lighthouse Beach Resort) that their website claims will be open in the 4th quarter of 2017 and have the largest swimming pool on the island. www.delfinsbeachresort.com.

- If you’re tired of listening to all the “talking heads” rattle on about the recent US election, you might want to look at “alternative” analyses. Check out the buzz on the internet regarding the predictions of Nostradamus and Baba Vanga in relation to the recent election.

Belgian and Bonairean Youngsters Inspired By Rembrandt

Rembrandt has finally come to Bonaire. Youngsters from Bonaire and Oostende (Belgium) worked together for two weeks to create various artworks inspired by the work of the Dutch artist. “Light in the Darkness” was the theme of the culture-bridging art project.

Rembrandt is known for his dramatic division between floods of light and sinister darkness in his paintings. But the theme also refers to the light an intercultural exchange can shine upon life. “Life has gotten complicated for youth anywhere in the world lately,” one of the Belgian participants explains. “It is not easy for us to find a job, the world around us seems to get more tough all the time.” With this project the youngsters reflect upon their lives, exchange ideas, laugh together, and create artworks. “It is also important for them to realize they can create art themselves,” one of the Belgian organizers explains. “It is not something only artists can do, they have all the fantasy and creativity within them.”

Juliandro, a participant from Bonaire, especially liked to work on the street art on Wilhelmina Square. He created it together with some local and some new Belgium friends. “Also it was a lot of fun to create portraits of ourselves, inspired by Rembrandt’s work. The Belgians were ‘chill’ and easygoing. We are not so different from each other,” Juliandro concludes.

Wilhelmina Park served as the exposition site to complete the project in a festive way and to show the results to all people interested. Besides street art and portraits, there were paintings made with homemade paint. The young artists created the paint out of egg yolk, water and colorants, just like it was used back in Rembrandt’s days. Besides the Dutch famous artist, there must have been some other inspiration in the air, as a remarkable number of tropical fish and palm trees can be detected in the various artworks. “Yes, we enjoyed Bonaire a lot,” one of the Belgian participants explains. “Besides the group tasks we went out snorkeling of course.” The exposition was cheered on by a spontaneous music performance by some of the local participants, and completed by a visit from Governor Edison Rijna.

The project is a cooperation between Jong Bonaire, Art Education Organization Mu-ze-um (Oostende) and Jong Bonaire. Organizers Harm Jan van Dijk (Bonaire Break) and Ewout Van Hooecker (Mu-ze-um) walked around, satisfied. They were amazed at how well the youngsters complement each other and how spontaneously they cooperate. “From the moment they met, energy was in the air.” In the future a group from Jong Bonaire might visit the Belgian group, or even join them on cultural and artistic exchanges elsewhere in Europe.

The World According To Boelie

Let me introduce myself. My name is Boelie. I am a red-nose pit-bull and live with Justine, the author of all those stories about the wonders of nature. As you have read in the last Reporter, those wonders were about to disappear and she didn’t know what she should write about. I proposed to temporarily take it over, because I lead an adventurous life compared to hers. Every day I meet different animals and humans, and there is always something going on. That is, I think, also because of my character. I’m quite expressive and responsive. I’m known as an ADHD-dog, but I have calmed down these last years. I’m older and wiser.

Where do I start? I cannot remember much of my early years. What I do know is that I ended up in the Animal Shelter on Bonaire at some point. There I was in a large kennel with a lot of other dogs. I was quite busy there, because I have it in me to be the boss and you must do your best to be one in a group. I was busy all day to encourage the other dogs to do what I wanted, and eventually I succeeded. They did exactly what I wanted: they ran after me and did not dare to contradict me or to go after things I did not like.

How do I do that? I bark loudly in their face and I run hard, I take a firm stand, accepting no opposition. If I wanted to eat first, they should not get in the way. If I wanted to greet people arriving at the kennel, I was the first to get caresses. I think people are much more fun than dogs. I think dogs smell bad, and when it comes to food you cannot trust them. People give you food, smell good, at least compared with dogs, and they pet them.

Dogs try to lick you if they want to be friends and then you smell their stinky breath. So that means I have few canine friends. Most of them I find to be stupid, brutal stinkers and they should stay away. If they don’t, then they get to know my teeth. You have to surprise those dogs by being the first to attack, otherwise they think you’re a wimp.

BREAKFAST

Breakfast literally means “breaking the fast” as you have had no food or “fasted” since the day before.

Breakfast helps top up the energy stores you have used up each night whilst your body repairs and renews itself. It also gives you energy for your morning activities, whether at work, school, home or out and about.

However, it is estimated that up to one third of us still regularly miss breakfast. Many of us put this down to time pressures in the morning, but with a little planning, you can find a breakfast choice to suit your lifestyle.

Is breakfast really important?

Yes. Apart from providing energy (calories) to kick-start your day, a healthy breakfast provides essential nutrients that the body needs, such as fiber, vitamins and key minerals such as calcium and iron. Research has shown that people who eat breakfast have more balanced diets than those who skip it, are less likely to be overweight, lose weight more successfully if overweight, and have reduced risk of certain diseases such as cardiovascular disease and diabetes. Missing breakfast may increase feelings of hunger later on in the day, resulting in snacking on less healthy foods without necessarily catching up on essential nutrients. Eating breakfast may also help to improve mental performance, concentration and mood – three more good reasons to eat something in the morning.

What makes a healthy breakfast?

Breakfast should provide about 20-25% of your daily nutritional requirements, and it’s not just about having any breakfast – it’s about having a healthy breakfast.

Wholegrain foods such as bread, cereals, oatmeal etc. provide energy, B vitamins, some iron and fiber. Cereals are a good choice: they are quick and easy to prepare, and are often fortified with vitamins, iron and calcium to contribute to your daily nutritional requirements. However, be careful to check the labels, as some of these products have added sugar and salt. Evidence suggests that oatmeal for breakfast may have a positive effect on total cholesterol concentration when compared to skipping breakfast.

If you’re pushed for time, try an oat-based packed breakfast. The night before, place some porridge oats in a pot and cover with enough low fat milk or yoghurt to soak into the oats, add some fresh or dried fruit on top, sprinkle with a bit of cinnamon for added flavor and store in the fridge. Then, in the morning just grab from the fridge before you leave the house – a perfect breakfast on the go.

Fruit and vegetables are good sources of vitamins and fiber. On your cereal, try chopped fresh fruit like a banana or some dried fruit, or add half a grapefruit or fruit salad to your usual breakfast.

For something different, try a fresh fruit smoothie. Just blend some fruit of your choice with low fat yoghurt or milk. Frozen berries or other fruits are also ideal for making smoothies.

Dairy foods give you protein, calcium and B vitamins. Natural yoghurt is delicious topped with fruit and a sprinkle of muesli. If you use milk and other products made from cow’s milk such as soya, oat, coconut, almond or rice, make sure they are unsweetened and fortified with calcium.

Remember to include a drink. Water, milk, pure fruit juice, tea and coffee all supply vital fluids. Being well hydrated also helps you to concentrate better.

If you can’t face eating first thing, try to eat within two hours of getting up. Keep some healthy wholegrain cereal at work. Or, if you are breakfasting on the go, choose a restaurant or café that has healthy choices like wholegrain bread or cereal, oatmeal, low fat yoghurts, fresh fruit salads and smoothies. Keep pastries and croissants as an occasional treat as they are high in fat, sugar and calories.

Mushroom Madness

We are in the midst of a mushroom growth explosion which hasn’t been seen in years. This is thanks to a soaking October and November. You never know what or where a mushroom might pop up in your garden. Don’t think mushrooms are hurting your plants. They may kill YOU if you eat them, but they are doing your plants a lot of good. And because we only see a fraction of the whole organism, kicking it over isn’t going to do anything. The organism puts an enormous amount of energy into forming mushrooms. It seems unfair to destroy it casually. About 5,000 species of fungi grow on the roots of approximately 2,000 species of coniferous and flowering trees. Another 130 fungal species tap into roots, threading their strands between cell walls.

On Bonaire I’ve noticed many different types of mushrooms. My garden is full of some that grow everywhere on the island. You see the photo of one growing in my yard on specific rotten leaves, another of some along a path. But I’ve also noticed those white ones that look like a small white closed umbrella. They are not popping up on rotten leaves, but I’ve seen them just on the red and grey hard soil along roads. And then you have those which are growing on the underside of trees on the thick old live or dead roots. In Papianu, the Thick Old Live or Dead roots, are Parasol di Zusmi. That means: umbrella for bad spirits.

In the past it was said that mushrooms had to do with bad spirits and voodoo. People in this area would walk with a big bow around them when they’d see them in their yard. They were scared of them. A local told me that when a certain type of mushroom on Bonaire was blowing its spore around with a certain sound, “phoeff!”, and a kind of a grey powder came out the of the cap of the mushroom, everyone would run away. They thought that it was not good, in a spiritual way, to come in contact with this grey powder. In fact it might not be good because it can be poisonous, but the locals were thinking of spiritual bad energy and not of real poison. And, besides, eating them was not even considered. However, in time mushrooms became more common in our daily food on Bonaire.

So now that you know more about these beautiful creations popping up in your wet yard, do enjoy them by your eyes and let them grow peacefully among your other plants.

And if you are crazy about mushrooms in your food, get them from a market for your own safety and enjoy this very healthy food in different creative recipes.

A Healthy Bonaire

Recently, as part of “Heart Week,” the Stichting Hart Voor Bonaire held free clinics for the public to check blood pressure, blood sugar and cholesterol at the Sport Hall, the hospital, Cocori and supermarkets Warehouse and Van der Tweel. The organization, manned totally by volunteers and led by Dr. Robert Van Dongen, promotes education on nutrition and exercise, sponsors vegetable gardens in Pelikaan and San Bernardo elementary schools and places AED (automated external defibrillator) equipment all over the island (entrance to Washington Park, the airport, in a police patrol car, at Bon Bida gym, etc.) and trains people to operate them.

The idea for these free clinics is to make it easier for those people who try to avoid going to the doctor but who maybe should. The clinics could serve from 40 to 60 persons per day, some of whom needed medical follow up.

Locals add them to their soups like goat and vegetable and fish soups, in their fresh salads and in the popular batata or babana stoba. I have eaten mushrooms in a delicious goat stoba with boniti and cooked batata dushi (sweet potatoes) and in local pizza and vegetable pies. For vegetarians mushrooms are a tasty and great protein support as a substitute for meat protein. Mushrooms can be added to any kind and type of food.

“Come dushi ku parasol di zambi.”
We wanted him. We invited him. We gave whatsoever - we would expand our family. We were careful. We were aware of the consequences. This would build, skin. We were ready. We finally decided. We want one. We plucked him from the nest. After years it can be over in a strike of lightning."

"This is my lesson to you: enjoy, because it can be over in a strike of lightning."

In a way, he is our depraved God. He was a king in Holland, and he is a king of demons. In scripture, Lord Beezle and his victim Beezlebüb, Beezle, short for Beelshebim, which means, in Jewish scripture, Lord of Demons. In other words: we invited the devil into our home. And, as the Romans say: Nomen est Omen. He is what he is named after: a little demon. But we loved him immediately. We still do.

He craves dawn. Like he is an inverted vampire. Do you want to please him? Unleash him into the morning, into the birth of day. He will show you fear in a handful of sunshine.

He dwelled well, in Amsterdam. That city that resembles Sodom and Gomorrath, that city where freedom is mandatory. He felt at ease, walking the canals - he didn't even mind his leash. He was petted by Japanese tourists, he was cuddled by young females, and elder ladies approached us offering us their inheritance. He was a heathen god.

Publicity agencies called us for pictures. He was offered vast amounts of money, just for a photo-shoot. He licked his paw and repeated what Gisele Bündchen once said: ‘I don't get dressed for less then 10 grand.’ He was a king in Holland, and he is a king here. Once again: it's our fault.

You can compare us to the servants of Dracula. He spares you, just because you do horrible things to please him. There is no room for guilt. We live under the terror - the terror of love. We can't help ourselves.

Dracula. He spares you, just because you do horrible things to please him. There is no room for guilt. We live under the terror - the terror of love. We can't help ourselves.

But he could have caused a rampage. He could have caused disaster. But he didn't. Why? Because the stewardesses love him. You just have to open the casket, give him daylight, show them to those stressed-out, dressed in royal blue ladies. And they melt. Like Swiss chocolate in tropical heat. Instantly they forget about drunk tourists, crying babies, low wages and and ass-grabbing men in business class. They see him. And he endears them. He extinguishes all sorrow. At first he didn't like the sun. He is nocturnal. He confrates with bats and wolves. But he adapted. Shed fur. Renewed himself. Then he became the coldblooded killer, the murderer we currently shelter.

Don't get me wrong, he can be cute. In the evening he joins us, peacefully in bed. Mainly because he adores the airco. That may be his only deity, the god-machine he worships. He stares at that weird box blowing cold air, and he settles himself. Maybe he will sleep on the floor, maybe he will jump on the bed and glorify you with his presence. If you are lucky, he will purr. He will share his satanic heat with you - and you will be graced, whether you like it or not. "Please make some room. I am royalty."

But once the sun rises, even if it's just the slightest splinter of light, you will awake. Then he jobs you with his paw. Repeatedly. He will not use his claws - he could easily scratch your eyes out -. he is merciful, but you will arise. Because there are things to be hunted, intruders that need to be expelled, food that needs to be eaten. You will comply. I will jah you with my royal paw you until you go insane.

So you emerge from your dreams and from your sleep, and you stumble towards the backdoor and grant him freedom. Freedom to kill.

In the time that you can prepare coffee, he will come back with his first victim. Mostly, it's a female blauwblauw (edemic Bonaire lizard, ed) that he will deposit on the kitchen floor, just to show off. And most of the time, the blauwblauw is still alive. And she will run for the closest hideout, behind a rug sack, or into a cupboard. Remember: you are naked. And some repellent is prancing around your house.

Beezle doesn’t really care that they hide. They will have to show up sometime. He being a mythical beast, has all the time in the world. He can wait for days, weeks. Patience is his middle name.

We, on the other hand, are worried about this lizard hiding beneath our cupboards, beneath our food supplies - worried that, in the middle of the night, our devil will awake, suspect an escaping prey and will hunt it through our living room, causing such a pandemonium that we will have to get up at three in the morning, just to pet him and say “Job well done.”

Because if you don’t congratulate him on his kill, he will bring the kill to you. He will throw this cold, wriggling lizard in your face. While you are sleeping. The only way to sooth him, is to feed him. He is - after all - male. The only problem is: he is picky. Very picky.

Extremely picky. Louis Quatorze was less picky. He only likes this one brand of food, called DeliCat. They might as well call it Castiron. He gorges on it. He refuses anything else.

Problem is: we didn’t find it on Bonaire. You will have better luck finding Atlantis, or the Holy Grail.

Not that we didn’t try. We went to every supermarket, buying every brand. We didn’t care about the price - you can’t bargain with the devil. We came home with bags and bags of cat food. But he just glimpsed at it, rejected cat food. It seemed like a waste to throw it out. So we went to the Bonaire Animal Shelter, which is a tremendous place. We donated the food, and were allowed into the cat palace they have over there. We have never seen that before: cats, living peacefully together, without quarrel, without hissing, without violence. Cats, just enjoying life. No satanic activity here. No masses. No ritual sacrifices. No blood on the kitchen floor.

They are well taken care of. One small cat even looked like an innocent version of Beezle; he just fell asleep on my back. Because that’s what cats will do to you: in the blink of an eye, they will turn you into servants. But, as Dylan would put it, you have to serve somebody. It might as well be the devil, disguised as the sweetest cat on earth, called Beezle.

LAST PIG STANDING

s with all things, Dear Reader, our series on feral pig biology, behavior and what it means for Bonaire, must come to an end!

Throughout these past few months we hope that you have enjoyed learning about feral pigs and perhaps uncovering a few startling facts about the impacts that they are having on Bonaire. To summarize, feral pigs do live on Bonaire. They are habitat generalists, which means they can live in a lot of different places. They mostly eat plant matter, but they will also eat the eggs and young of native fauna. They have high reproductive rates, they reach sexual maturity at a relatively young age and females can have up to eight piglets per litter. Feral pigs are somewhat habitual, they like to use the same paths to travel, but they also move around a lot. When they sleep at night, sometimes they will make a little nest for themselves. You can often tell that a feral pig has been in the area if you see that ground is heavily disturbed and that the roots of plants have been exposed. With the exception of Rincon where they seem quite capable of moving around, pigs in the wild tend to be wary and cautious, which can make it difficult to track and catch them. If you try to catch a pig once and miss, it will quickly learn how to avoid the trap in the future. Because of how feral pigs eat and how much they eat, they can be quite destructive of the environment. They will dig up plants, trample ground nests, and can burrow through fences to get into people’s gardens and fields. In the US it is estimated that they cause over $1.5 billion dollars in damage each year to the agricultural industry alone. And, feral pigs can, although unlikely, be harmful for people. They carry diseases and can transmit them to other livestock or pets, as well as people through consumption of contaminated meat. In short, feral pigs deservedly have a bad reputation. But, just like the lion-fish, they are malicious and delicious! So why not make lemonade from lemons and work to catch them, properly butcher them and eat them! That is what Echo proposes to do.

The Echo team has already been out and about since the beginning of the year monitoring pig activity and removing pigs from the wild, where and when possible. But we need your help! If you see pigs, please report them to our Pig Hotline +599 786 -7447 (786-PIGS) so that we may know where the pigs are located and can go after them. When you report a pig sighting, try to include as much information as possible, for example: the approximate size (small, medium, large), unique coloration (e.g. black spots or orange fur); the location and time, and anything else you think might be helpful for our team to locate it. You can also sign up to receive updates about the progress of the feral pig control project and to be registered for pig meat raffles, which we hope to get started in 2017, by emailing us at julianaka@echobonaire.org.

Pigs On The Beach

Five of the eight protected sharks

The Dutch Ministry of Economic Affairs working closely with the Dutch Caribbean Nature Alliance and in consultation with the Dutch Elasmobranch Association (DES), came up with a shortest of eight species: three species of hammerhead shark, whale shark, oceanic white tip shark and small tooth sawfish as well as two species of manta ray have been nominated for inclusion on the SPAW protected species list. These are all species threatened by human activity in the Caribbean, which need protection if they are to survive into the future. This recommendation is an important first step toward permanent inclusion of these sharks and rays on the SPAW protocol. In February 2017 a final vote will ratify the protection for these species.

Tadzio Bervoets, acting chairman of the Dutch Caribbean Nature Alliance and chairman of the Save our Shark Project: “In 2015 we started the Save our Sharks project which aims to set up shark protection in the Dutch Caribbean. It is fantastic that we can now play a role in cross-border protection and are well on our way to providing Caribbean sharks with the protection they deserve. We are confident that the proposals will be endorsed at the final ballots in February.”

Press release/ STINAPA

Delegates from 14 Caribbean countries including Caribbean Netherlands (Saba & St. Eustatius and Bonaire), met in Miami last week to discuss the protection of marine animals in the Caribbean. The request of the Netherlands, regional governments today recommended eight species of sharks and rays for protection under the Specially Protected Areas and Wildlife (SPAW) Protocol.

What is the SPAW Protocol?

The SPAW Protocol is the only legal instrument for cross-border protection of wildlife in the Caribbean. Through the protocol, signatory countries have made firm agreements to ensure the protection of animals and protected areas throughout the region. To date, no sharks or rays are listed on the Protocol, even though these species are particularly threatened in the Caribbean. Overfishing as well as degradation of habitats, de-horning and destruction of vital habitats such as coral reefs and mangrove forests are the main causes of the decline in shark numbers.

If you see pigs, please report them to our Pig Hotline +599 786 -7447 (786-PIGS) so that we may know where the pigs are located and can go after them. When you report a pig sighting, try to include as much information as possible, for example: the approximate size (small, medium, large), unique coloration (e.g. black spots or orange fur); the location and time, and anything else you think might be helpful for our team to locate it. You can also sign up to receive updates about the progress of the feral pig control project and to be registered for pig meat raffles, which we hope to get started in 2017, by emailing us at julianaka@echobonaire.org.

Pigs On The Beach

Five of the eight protected sharks

The Dutch Ministry of Economic Affairs working closely with the Dutch Caribbean Nature Alliance and in consultation with the Dutch Elasmobranch Association (DES), came up with a shortest of eight species: three species of hammerhead shark, whale shark, oceanic white tip shark and small tooth sawfish as well as two species of manta ray have been nominated for inclusion on the SPAW protected species list. These are all species threatened by human activity in the Caribbean, which need protection if they are to survive into the future. This recommendation is an important first step toward permanent inclusion of these sharks and rays on the SPAW protocol. In February 2017 a final vote will ratify the protection for these species.

Tadzio Bervoets, acting chairman of the Dutch Caribbean Nature Alliance and chairman of the Save our Shark Project: “In 2015 we started the Save our Sharks project which aims to set up shark protection in the Dutch Caribbean. It is fantastic that we can now play a role in cross-border protection and are well on our way to providing Caribbean sharks with the protection they deserve. We are confident that the proposals will be endorsed at the final ballots in February.”

Press release/ STINAPA

Delegates from 14 Caribbean countries including Caribbean Netherlands (Saba & St. Eustatius and Bonaire), met in Miami last week to discuss the protection of marine animals in the Caribbean. The request of the Netherlands, regional governments today recommended eight species of sharks and rays for protection under the Specially Protected Areas and Wildlife (SPAW) Protocol.

What is the SPAW Protocol?

The SPAW Protocol is the only legal instrument for cross-border protection of wildlife in the Caribbean. Through the protocol, signatory countries have made firm agreements to ensure the protection of animals and protected areas throughout the region. To date, no sharks or rays are listed on the Protocol, even though these species are particularly threatened in the Caribbean. Overfishing as well as degradation of habitats, de-horning and destruction of vital habitats such as coral reefs and mangrove forests are the main causes of the decline in shark numbers.
To The Editor:

As a long time resident of Bonaire who has seen the dramatic change in the animal care situation over the last 20 years I want to compliment Laura DeSalvo on her excellent article praising the Bonaire Animal Shelter. Sometimes we don’t seem to realize the dedication and love that make up the core of the staff and volunteers at the Shelter. If they weren’t dedicated to the cause of making a better world for the island dogs and cats they wouldn’t be doing what they’re doing. Cleaning kennels, scooping poop, all the ‘dirty hands’ stuff that most people wouldn’t do make up a large part of their day. The budget is small which limits how many dogs and cats can be kept at one time – feeding, medicating, neutering and spaying, etc. costs money. But even with a limited budget over 400 animals this year have been spayed and neutered.

And the Shelter is very proactive in the area of community education. Staff and volunteers visit the schools with educational programs and also arrange for the schools to come to the Shelter to visit and to learn. Those who are critical of the Shelter for not being a ‘no kill’ environment should try to understand that the Shelter is only so big, the budget is only so large, and the staff is so small – only four part-time workers. There are so many animal welfare supporters on Bonaire it just seems logical that if everyone would work together and acknowledge that, while there are differences in opinion in some areas, working together and being able to reach some compromises in the most controversial areas is the way to reach everyone’s goals.

As a cohesive group more money can be raised, more kennels can be built, more staff can be hired. Everyone involved in animal welfare is there because they care about animals; being at cross-purposes is counter productive.

Can we not come together, put aside our differences, and all go together in the one direction that will benefit the island’s dogs and cats? That one direction is a long road made short by everyone involved doing the right thing.

Pet Of The Week

TIGRE

If there were a contest for cat male model of the year, Tigre would definitely be the winner! This handsome red tabby loves to have his photo taken, and always happily strikes a myriad of poses to be sure the picture is “purrrfect.”

Tigre arrived at the Shelter in April of 2015 as a lone kitten about 12 weeks old. Over the last year and a half he has blossomed into a sweet, gentle cat with an endearing personality.

Tigre is known to the Shelter staff as a calm and loving cat, he never was a rowdy “troublemaker” as a kitten nor as an adult...he is affectionate and kind to humans and to his feline roommates. He doesn’t bully his way into seeking attention from cat palace visitors, but will respond with head bumps and “rollovers” when a visitor chooses to give him some affection. However, when he sees a camera in the area...Tigre is right there practicing his model moves for the photographer!

Tigre is two years old and will be a perfect companion for anyone looking for a calm, well-adjusted and very affectionate cat...and a sure bet as a cat calendar candidate! He is healthy, vaccinated, sterilized and has been patiently waiting for a forever home. If you have room in your heart and your home for a handsome and loving feline companion, please come and have an encounter with this special young cat.

You can visit Tigre and all the other cats and dogs at Animal Shelter Bonaire, Kaminda Lagun 26, Tuesday through Friday 9am to 12noon and 3 to 5pm, Saturdays 8 am to 3pm nonstop. Story & photo by Jane Madden-Disko
